Jul 21, 2019 [Embed] [Embed] [Embed] [Embed] (LiveActionNews) — In an episode scheduled for broadcast on March 16, the ABC daytime soap opera General Hospital will feature a powerful LGBTQ character — and a trans actor in the role — for the first time. The episode, titled “All In the Family,” will feature an original storyline about a trans man named Gil McKinley (played by Dennis Miller) who becomes a surrogate to a grieving lesbian couple. Miller, whose son died unexpectedly when he was 13, is a longtime fan of the soap opera that made him a star in the 1980s — and recently called the series’ directors and producers to help inform the storyline. “They saw that I was a really good actor and that I could bring my personal life into it,” he told NBC News. The coming-of-age story of McKinley, who finds out he is trans when he is a teenager, earned the 35-year-old New York-based actor his first Emmy Award nomination. In the episode, McKinley will be coming out to his adoptive father, Luke (Alan Dale), and rekindling his connection with his late biological mother, Sunny (Patsy Pease), whom he hadn’t spoken to for 15 years. “The most interesting part was Gil and Luke’s relationship,” said Miller. “Luke is a bully to Gil, as any typical dad would be to a gay kid.” McKinley, who spent his teenage years on the streets, grew up with a mother who was gay. When he was a child, his mother struggled with substance abuse and abusive relationships, eventually leaving his father and four siblings with their grandmother. She later died 2d92ce491b
