Paraíso (Argentina) (AFP) - Argentina on Friday sentenced former World Cup-winning captain Diego Maradona to five years in prison for taking part in a kick-boxing match despite having a previously diagnosed heart condition. The announcement of the sentence in a Buenos Aires court came days after he was convicted of the lesser charge of physical assault and sentenced to a month in prison. The judge said a document showing a doctor's assessment that Maradona had a heart condition was false and that Maradona, who said he has epilepsy, was faking seizures to avoid prison. "In making that decision, I consider it very serious that the most important document that was sent to the federal judge in this case was a false document, the truth being that it didn't exist," Judge María Angélica Muzzi told reporters. Judge Muzzi added that she was satisfied that Maradona did not suffer any physical harm during the fight, but said the country's criminal code was clear on the punishment for such activities. "I am satisfied that the defendant (Maradona) didn't receive any physical harm and that the seriousness of the situation is not such that he (Maradona) should be considered to be guilty of any offence," the judge said. "This is not a case of 'taking a punch'," she said. "This is a case of someone who with a condition that makes it hard to have a normal heartbeat having participated in a fight against a professional fighter and having attacked him." Maradona, 56, had claimed the pair of kick-boxing opponents had pushed him down as he was walking past, though the judge dismissed this. The former player and football icon was eventually handed a sentence of two years in prison for the assault conviction and a further three years for the game-fixing conviction, to be served consecutively. - Arrested in Switzerland - Authorities had arrested Maradona, the "Captain" of Argentina's 1986 World Cup-winning side, in the Swiss resort of Gstaad in July 2018. Story continues They had accused him of attempting to pass bogus "match-fixing" documents to football officials during

I was wondering if anyone knew a way to do a regular backup of the Eventlog from Windows Server 2008? A: You might try using the sysinternals log collector (SLC) which is part of sysinternals utilities suite. It's a free app that can collect data from multiple sources like system log files, network log files, etc. and can analyze it. This may not be exactly what you're looking for, but it will give you a view of your system. Q: What has happened to the Cat in the Hat, and how is he connected to Dr. Stone? In Dr. Stone, the Cat in the Hat finds himself in an alternate reality (which was created to be an alternative reality in the first place), where he discovers that there are alternate universes and alternate versions of himself, and that a green race of aliens and a Dr. Stone-like figure exist in each version. Dr. Stone is the main protagonist, the only character to appear in all the alternate realities, and his function is to provide a connection between each universe. For example, the two versions of the Cat in the Hat might be linked by the fact that both are wearing the same sweater. What happened to the Cat 2d92ce491b
