I'm a.NET developer who is starting a new project (on Windows). I'm trying to decide whether to use a centralized source control system (Git or Mercurial) or a distributed source control system (Subversion or Bazaar). Is there a clear "winner" in these two choices? A: That really depends on the project. For large, monolithic applications with a large number of files, SVN is clearly the way to go. It will be easy for non-technical users to use it
