3 comments : Is there any reason that the drivers aren't always updated? I mean, if there are driver problems your computer could crash, or freeze? However, I'm just curious as to why people won't update their drivers. Perhaps they don't know about it? Lol

The overall goal of this project is to understand the molecular bases of signaling in bone. The effects of the signals formed during various phases of bone modeling will be investigated. The hypothesis is that the bone matrix plays a major role in the development of joint bone. This hypothesis will be tested by investigating the effects of growth factors and other agents on the development of bone of heterologous bone grafts. Specifically, the effects of the following factors will be studied: transforming growth factor, insulin-like growth factor, fibroblast growth factor, and dexamethasone on the growth of bones and bone grafts in rats with congenital genetic defect of bone growth. The effects of the extracellular matrix on the development of bone grafts will be studied by using a chondroid matrix obtained from embryonic and neonatal cartilage. The effect of various types of implanted bone matrix will be studied. The action of the growth factors and other agents will be investigated by employing cell culture and bone labeling techniques. The structure of the extracellular matrix of the tissues will be studied by means of autoradiographic and histologic methods. The dynamics of bone formation and modeling will be investigated by using a method of bone labeling.

Q: Running custom command files from Matlab I'd like to run some code from a custom Matlab function file, but I'd like to do this in a way that is similar to what a normal Matlab function file will do: `function [x y] = myfunc(x1, x2) x = x1 + x2; y = sin(x);` This will result in: `>> myfunc([1 2]) ans = 3 4 5` This is straightforward and my question is how to do the same thing but with a custom command file, in my case `customcommandfile.m`, here on how the code looks like: `function [x y] = myfunc(x1, x2) x = x1 + x2; y = sin(x);` Now, this won't work: `>> load('c:\path\`
